

Military and Veterans Info Session: Future Student 2019

JEFF WILLADSEN: So I wanted to welcome everybody. I want to let you know that at WSU here, WSU Global Campus, we really value our veterans and military service members and all the families, and we want to thank you for your service. And thank you for being here, too, and we're glad that you're interested. And we want to give you some good information that could help you make decisions and learn a little bit more about us, what we do, benefits and credits, and all the different things.

Thanks for taking the time to join us. I just want to welcome everybody. And then, we'll go ahead and get into the slideshow here.

All right. So some things we'll be talking about. We're going to start with introductions. So I'm going to let you guys introduce yourselves in the chat box and then me and Matt and Emily will introduce ourselves and tell you a little bit about us and what our expertise is.

Then, we'll talk a little bit about WSU Global Campus, who we are, what we do, a little bit of our relationship to veterans and military. Then, I'll kind of go into talking about transferring the military credits. How, if you are a veteran or active duty service member, your training you can use to make you get through your degree faster. So we'll talk a little bit about that and how we do that here at WSU.

Then, we'll talk about the educational benefits that you may or may not have heard of, the different things that you can do as a veteran, reservist, active duty, or family member. We'll talk about all those and just kind of do a little bit of an overview. If you have questions, I'll have some resources at the end to get a little deeper into that if some things pop up or you can ask me. And if I don't have an answer, then I'll try my best to find it.

Then, I'll give you over to Emily and she'll go over some of the admission stuff, our admissions counselor, and how you get started, what you'll need to do, and then she'll talk a little bit about the degree programs. She'll be able to talk mostly more about the undergrad ones and maybe we'll talk a little bit about the graduate programs, too, and we can answer any questions about that later if we don't have them now.

And then, I'll hand it over to Matt. His area of expertise is the business graduate programs. So those are really popular here, especially with veterans. So he can speak to that and give you some more information. And also some tools and resources and then we'll open it up for questions.

So for me, my name's Jeff Willadsen. Right now, I'm the senior writer for Global Campus. I can do communications and public relations and stuff. But the reason I'm doing this webinar is I got my degree while I was-- my master's degree in strategic communication-- here at WSU Global Campus while I was active duty in the Navy. So I have experience with that and I used my GI bill and my tuition assistance while I did that and I spent almost no money getting my master's degree. So I was really grateful for knowing how to use those benefits.

And I had a really good experience here. And I had some great teachers, I had great classmates, and I really learned a lot which helped to get me where I am now. So that's how I-- it was a good stepping stone to get me here.

So right currently now I'm a Navy veteran and also I'm a reservist right now. So I might go and do my two weeks a month-- two weeks a year, begin the month. So I can speak that a little bit too, you know, and I understand that-- that kind of lifestyle, if we have any of those. Yeah. Right now, I'm a current staff member. So I'll go ahead and switch it over to Emily and introduce yourself.

EMILY CHANDLER: Hey, everyone. My name is Emily Chandler and I am an admissions counselor with the Global Campus. I've been here for, gosh, almost over five years now. And in terms of kind of what I do at Global is I work with undergraduate students and really help you get started with the process of beginning school. So anything from what is the Global Campus, how does it work, what do I want to study, to getting you to get those final transcripts in and get you started to finishing your degree. So that's really what I do here.

MATT BEER: All right. Welcome, everybody. Glad you could join us this evening. It's great to have you with us. So I'm a Washington State graduate back in the olden times, 19-- something a long time ago. Much older than the rest of you.

I spent the next 22 years in the United States Air Force. So I'm an Air Force veteran. I'm a C 130 guy by trade. And I had the great fortune and opportunity to come back here to my alma mater and help the school and help veterans primarily in the Carson College of Business. I work mostly with MBA and EMBA students who are coming back and getting their business degrees. And I work closely with our Washington State Veterans Affairs office as well trying to promote positive programs for our students throughout our campuses both online and our resident campus as well.

So that's kind of me. That's kind of what I do. So if you have any questions about that or just college in general, please free to reach out tonight or even after, shoot me an email. I'm happy to put you in touch with folks that might be able to help you. Thanks.

JEFF WILLADSEN: All right. So I'll start with what is WSU Global Campus and kind of who we are. WSU, you've probably have seen us around. You know, really popular with our sports teams and everything. And we're, especially in the Northwest, very famous and everyone knows our logo and everything.

But we've been here since 1890. We have six campuses all across Washington State, over in Vancouver, and Everett, and Tri-Cities, Spokane. And then also we have here, Global Campus. So we are our own campus.

Then, let's see, Global Campus started out in 1992. I think it started out with correspondence, so doing stuff by mail. And then the internet came along, we started coming together and being able to put stuff all across the world. So there are [INAUDIBLE]. When I was going to Global Campus, there's people over in the Middle East, in Europe, and all across the world that we're talking to.

All of our programs are online. So everything you don't have to do anything here or at any other campuses. You can do it all online.

All the degrees are the same as anything else you would learn at-- earn at WSU. So the same degree as Matt got and everything, it's got the same prestige and everything. It's not an online degree. It's a WSU degree and you can earn that online.

One thing that's a little bit different for us, you know, we have a different demographic because our campus is virtual and not in one place. So in the other campuses, people are a lot younger. You know, they have a lot of people coming out of high school and going to college. And in our campus, a lot of people are older, have already started their careers, have families. Our average age is 31.

And we actually have a lot more military people percentage wise than our other campuses. So for example, at Pullman here, they have about 1%, which matches up with the general population of a military affiliated people. There's about 1% in the country who are-- were in the military.

But here, we have about 8%. And that might be a little bit more, too, because we're still working on kind of figuring out who all is military affiliated in our-- at our-- because there are some people who are family members who we might not know of yet. So we're working on trying to get even more of that and understand who all is military affiliated and Global Campus.

But, yeah, we definitely-- because of that, we want to be able to get out there and give special attention to our military and veterans and make sure that they are using all their benefits and their credits and everything. So here's some more about us, like what you can get out of, specifically, WSU Global Campus. We definitely have some prestige as you can see there. US News and World Report has ranked us for bachelor's degrees, veterans.

And some benefits of an online degree is you can do, like I said, 100% WSU, but it's online and you can do it whenever you want, wherever you want, you know, across the world. But while you're doing that, we actually have a lot of community stuff you can do to. There's opportunities to do government, if you're one of these student government. We have a lot of online students all across Washington and the world who are involved with that.

You could also do like these webinars. If you want to do other things that you have interests in, global connections, you can do that. So we try to make it kind of an online campus experience where if you want to get involved, you can get more involved and kind of be more like a normal campus experience.

All right. We also have the academic advisors and we have career counseling and some other community things that can help you move forward in your degree and your career. And then once you do graduate, we have a really powerful alumni network. Lots of Cougars all around the world that can help you with your career and help connect you in networking and all that kind of stuff. So there were some good things about us.

So moving on to some of the military stuff. If you were in the military-- I know we have some family members. But I see that we have some-- oh, yeah, there we go. We've got reservists. And we got-- who was active duty, nine years? Me, too. Cool. Yeah.

For those who are in the military, transferring military credits can really help move along your experience, getting your degree faster. I used this a lot to get my bachelor's degree. I did it while I was active duty. Not at WSU. I did it at another school.

I did my master's here. But when I did that, it really helped me move along. I was able to use a lot of my credits that I got for my technical training and my basic training, went into my degree and I was able to get a lot faster because of that. So I'll go into that a little bit.

Most people-- I see some Navy in there. I haven't seen any-- oh, we've got Air Force. So for all the branches except Air Force, you can use the joint service transcript or JST and you probably heard of this. It takes all your training and you can-- it puts it into a transcript which you can use to move your degree along.

So you know, you can save your benefits for something else. You can-- it gets you closer to graduation or, you know, go ahead. And that's what probably most of the branches have that.

For Air Force, they have the air universities. That's what the Air Force has. So you can also use that. I have a little less experience with that. I used my JST, but same thing. You know, you can do up to the 30 credits.

So that will help move it along if it, you know, and you can apply that. So once you do start going through the admissions process, you can put in your transcripts and there's a little more about-- if you want to go to this website, transfercredit.wsu.edu, get a little more information about that. That's the transfer clearinghouse, I think. So that will give you a little bit more information about transferring those. But that really can help move along and get you going and get done quicker.

So we'll go into the benefits a little bit. So as you move along through your degree, it's going to help you if you can pay for it and not have to out of pocket. As I said before, I wasn't-- I think I only spent-- I spent a few hundred on things like books. And I think one year I did run out of TA, which we'll talk about, so I had to pay a little bit out of pocket.

But I got all the way through my master's degree and almost didn't have to pay for anything. So that really helps not to worry about loans, all that stuff. So I'll try to go over the benefits for all the different categories here.

So for military affiliated, there's four general categories. You have active duty people who are active duty right now. You have people who are a reserve or National Guard veterans. And then, dependents or, you know, spouses, kids, things like that. So there's going to be different benefits that people can take advantage of if you're in any of those categories. So I'll go over those real quick.

For active duty, a big one is tuition assistance. So this covers 250 for semester credits and then it has a limit per fiscal year there, so 18 credits. So it won't cover everything, but that will help, you know.

And this is what I used when I was doing my bachelors degree. I also used it when I did my masters. But I did-- what I talk about here is the GI Bill. I used the TA Top-Up, so I used both.

When I started doing my master's degree, it's a little more cost per credit to do a graduate program. So if you're doing that, it helps to have that you can use your GI Bill and then Top-Up at the same time. Some things with Top-Up, there are some requirements. I believe you have to-- let's see, I think all of them-- all the branches do that for active duty people.

It's kind of a voluntary thing. It's not something that, you know-- and I believe you have to get it approved through your command. They might have different requirements. You have to be able to have enough time and service to complete your courses. So if you're going to be getting out soon, they won't let you do it past that time.

And I believe you have to do a degree plan. So that they'll want to know what degree you're going for and they'll make sure you're following that degree plan, so you can't use that for anything other than the degree. You can't use it for the non-degree options, which we'll talk about later.

And then the GI Bill, there are two. You know there's the Montgomery and Post 9/11. The Post 9/11 is what a lot more people are using now. I had both and actually used the Montgomery a little bit for my TA Top-Up. I was told by the people who helped me out that it kind of gave me a little bit more bang for my buck as far as that.

But if you do have Montgomery, if you switch to Post 9/11, you can't go back. So I used my Montgomery for a little while and then I actually end up transferring [INAUDIBLE] look like, but I transferred the rest to my wife. But yes, there's those two choices.

The Post 9/11 is the one that has the allowances. So you can get housing allowance with that. You can get the books. So we'll talk about that a little more when we get to veterans. The TA Top-Up is using both.

There's also the Vocational Rehabilitation and Employment. That's another for active duty and veterans can take advantage of that. That's a VA program. And that can have an education and career counseling. So that's why I put that on there.

You can get onto that on the VA if you're interested in doing that. That's kind of a program for veterans to try to help get them acclimated to civilian life, like that kind of thing. But active duty can do it. And that will help you kind of give you an idea what degree you want to get and career counseling and that kind of thing. But that's another option that's available to you through the VA.

So for reserves, you have the Montgomery GI Bill Selective Reserve. So I know a little less about that. I have some information here, though, if people do have questions.

And yeah, we can talk about that more. I have some information on that. But I know that's a little different than the-- you know, they don't have the post 9/11 with the allowances and stuff. It's more like the Montgomery GI Bill, the older version. So the reservists can do that.

There's also the Reserve Educational Assistance Program, but that is discontinued for most people. I think there are some people who are still eligible, but most people aren't now. And then the people who are, I think it goes completely away in November of this year.

So if you are eligible or you think you might be and you're a reservist, we'll, you know, we can look into that and see if you would be able to use that. But for most people, probably not. Think it's kind of an older thing that they're phasing out.

So for most reservists, if that's all you've ever been is a reservist, you know you don't have your active duty stuff, the Montgomery GI Bill for a reservist would be what you would be looking into in using for yours.

So for veterans, we talk about the Montgomery GI Bill. This is like kind of the Vietnam era GI bill that's been around for a long time where it doesn't have any allowances attached to it. It's kind of just to pay the tuition.

Like I said, I actually used this. I was told that using it I could get paid by credits versus time. I forget how, but there's a certain way that when you use it with a TA Top-Up you can get a little bit more out of it. Whereas the Post 9/11, if you're using TA, it's doesn't go as far. But, you know, when you're a veteran, you talk to her about that.

But I think most people are probably, if they can't do the Post 9/11, they'll do that because you can get allowances out of it. You can get a housing allowance, like your basic allowance for housing, BAH, you get when you're on active duty. It's based on where you're located. So you know, it'll be more or less, depending on where you are in the country.

And you can find out on the VOD website how much that would be. It also depends on whether or not you're full time. So if you're not full time, you won't get the full housing allowance. And the office here, the veteran's office here, can help you kind of calculate what that will be.

And I believe there's a book allowance, too. Not quite sure how much it is. But you can get a little bit of help with books, which can be expensive. And then I talked about the employment and career counseling that we talked about before. That's also available to veterans from the VA. So it can help you figure out a little bit about how you want to use your degree for your career, things like that, how do you plan ahead.

For dependents, you can use the GI Bill if it's transferred. I actually-- I did this personally. I transferred it to my wife. I was able to do that when I became a reservist. Usually they let you do this as an incentive for reenlisting. Yeah. So for dependents.

So military veterans that could potentially transfer their GI Bill. Usually, it's used as an incentive. For so for me, they told me I had to reenlist or enlist in the reserves for, I think, six years I had to do and they let me do it. But if you do that, they'll transfer whatever you didn't use to your spouse.

And then so dependents you can use it just like a service member would. So for example, my wife could come here and she could use it and potentially get the BAH, get everything out of it just like a service member would. They could also transfer the Montgomery GI Bill. Probably be a little less. I mean, if that's all they have, they can probably do that. But if they have the option to do the Post 9/11, probably would be better to use that.

And there's also a few different programs just for survivors and dependents. So that's for like Gold Star families and things like that to help them. We give some special reverence for people like that. So there's a lot of different ways.

I have the-- on Military One Source, there's a lot of information about that. There's a lot of scholarships for spouses and for dependents. And if you go to that page right there, that will have it all. I think I saw it at the end as well. You can get a lot more.

There's-- for specific, I know there's a grant for Coast Guard, Marine Corps. So there might be some scholarships and things that will really help you out. There's a lot on here. If you go to that right there, that might help spouses a lot.

I remember when I was active duty, my wife ended up using it for a degree she was going for. She got her bachelors and she was able to use some scholarships and things that helped her out. So, yeah, that would be either if you're the spouse or dependent of a veteran, or active duty, or you're a reservist, go take a look at those if you're in that category and see if those might apply to you.

All right. So that's kind of an overview of the credits and some of the benefits there that can help you out. A lot of that stuff did help me out and I wanted to be able to pass the information on to people and let them know that they can do it too. And here's a little more information from Emily, if you are interested in getting started, here's how you do it.

EMILY CHANDLER: All righty. Thank you. So for the application process, I know when you're first thinking about either going back to school or starting your degree, it can feel a little overwhelming because it can seem like there are a lot of steps and where do you even begin? And that's why I am an admissions counselor. I'm here to help you through that process of starting.

So I've broken it down here. We have three main steps to get started at WSU. So if you, after this webinar get excited and want to get started, these are the first three steps to begin with.

So the first step is to kind of decide how you're going to fund your education. So as we just talked about, we talked a lot about benefits, so if you're planning to use benefits, you want to start getting that squared away. And if you are planning to apply for federal financial aid through the FAFSA, then you would also want to fill that form out.

So the FAFSA is for need based financial aid. It's based on your taxes. So if you are planning to use that instead of benefits or in addition to benefits, you would want to get that filled out. So for financial aid, for the FAFSA, you want to fill it out essentially as soon as possible. If you're thinking about starting at all in 2020 for the 2019 to 2020 academic year-- so that would be for our spring semester that starts in January or our summer semester that has varying start dates, but essentially begins in May, then you'll want to fill out the FAFSA as soon as possible.

If you're thinking about starting in fall of 2020, you can begin to fill out the FAFSA as soon as October of this year. So highly recommend filling that out. Then the next form of funding we have is scholarships and there's quite a few different opportunities for that. And we do have a scholarship website that details all of them there and I'm happy to answer any questions you guys have about that.

And then, the next step is really to apply for admission. Now the nice thing about applying for admission is that it gets you this online student center where you can track all of your components at once. You can track your financial aid. You can track your application status. So that way if you're not sure where you're at in the process, you can always take a look at your student center and you gain that access by applying.

So you will be able to begin applying for admission for all of our 2020 terms starting around the 15th of this month. So you'll be able to submit your application for that.

And then, the third step is to request your official transcripts from every college that you've attended. Now, if you have over one year of transferable college work, you're only going to need to submit your official transcript from each college that you've attended. However, if you have less than one year of transfer work or you're not quite sure, please feel free to contact me. There's just some additional documentation you would need to submit such as your high school transcripts. And that's a really good conversation for us to have so you know exactly what you need to submit.

And I did chat a bit about what my role as an admissions counselor is, but essentially I'm your person. So if you have any questions along the way, you're not sure where you are, you're not sure who to reach out to, I'm the go to person. So you can always send me an email.

You can give me a call and I'm happy to help you and get you connected to the correct resource. So that's answering questions along the way. I'm here to help you find the right fit for your degree program, which we're going to talk about those degree programs next, and I can also connect you to different resources.

So here are the current undergraduate degrees that we offer online. So these are the bachelor programs that we have. And as you can see, we have we have a number of them and we are continuing to add handfuls of programs here and there.

So the main categories of programs we offer-- so as you can see, we have a number of business options there including accounting, management, management information systems, marketing, and we also offer a hospitality business management program. Now all of the majors within the College of Business, which those programs fall under, they have a special set of requirements to them that we call business certification requirements. It's just our fancy way of saying prerequisites for the major.

And if you're interested in pursuing anything within business administration, I do recommend contacting me, especially if you have some college work, or you're thinking about taking additional college work before transferring, just to make sure we're setting you up for success there.

Now, in terms of our other programs, we have a number under the, kind of, social sciences or humanities umbrella there. So some of those programs would be anthropology, criminal justice, those types of programs, psychology, political science. And so that's another category that we have.

And then we also have some other categories such as data analytics and that is definitely a more specialized degree. So if you're interested in that program, that's another one I'd encourage you to reach out to me on. All right. I'm ready for the next slide.

And in addition to undergraduate degrees, we do offer some graduate options. So if you wanted to continue on with your education, you could certainly pursue a graduate degree. Now, this is a little out of my realm of expertise. I'm the undergraduate admissions counselor.

But the thing with the graduate programs is that it's really important to connect directly with the program that you're interested in. Each program has its own set of requirements. So it is important to-- it is important to make sure that you're connecting directly with that program to ensure you're meeting the prerequisites, that you understand how the program works.

So if you're interested in any of the graduate programs-- and Matt is actually going to come on to talk about our MBA programs, so he would be a great point of contact for those. But if you're interested in any of the others that are listed here, please let us know and we can get you connected directly with the program contact. Now I noticed we had a question here.

So Nia asked Emily-- I'm currently a student at Tri-Cities and I was wondering if I have to get transcripts and apply for admission, would I officially be a student at Global instead? So Mia, if you're interested in switching to the Global Campus, and you're currently-- oh, and this is a private. I saw that she's just sent this to me. Sorry about that.

But this is a good question, though, because if you are currently at another campus and you're looking to switch over to Global, it's just a simple form. So you just fill out the change of campus form and that gets you switched over to Global. You just want to make sure that we do offer the program that you are currently pursuing and you just fill out the change of campus form.

And Mia, I'll be sure to grab your email address and we can send you a link directly to that form and you would switch over to Global, so you would be a Global student instead of a Tri-Cities student. Sorry if you didn't want me to say that one out loud, but I think it was a good question for everybody. All right. Switch it over to Matt here.

MATT BEER: All right. Cool. My turn, right? So I did notice-- I was going to add one thing that Mia had asked and it was about credits taken online, or one class in person versus online. So I'm not sure. I know Emily probably can answer what your course load can consist of when it comes to online versus in-person. But Janet Kayes is a good contact down in Tri-Cities if you have a question about how that works down there at your campus. She's a good resource.

For me, like I said, my world is the online MBA. So I deal primarily with folks who are getting their graduate degrees. Although I do a lot of questions from time-to-time about undergraduate degree and benefits and things like that. So I'm happy to answer those questions.

My role here as the Military and Veteran Affairs manager is actually not dealing too much with benefits. What I do really is programmatic. So for our folks who are at the graduate level, they're really looking to kind of add some fuel to the fire of their career.

And so what we do is we build programs, networking programs, career coaching, some resume building, things like that really enhance their experience. So that's largely what I do for those students. And also a lot of providing those resources.

If you didn't know there's tons of resources out there for you as military affiliated, I'll call it. So whether you're a veteran, active duty, spouse, or a dependent, there's a lot of resources out there to make sure you're successful. So be sure to-- and I'm going to actually type a message here really quick for one of the premiere ones, which is called Service to School.

You can Google services for veterans and I'll put the website up there. But it's a great one. Their sole mission in life is to make sure you have the resources you need as a veteran to get into the school you want to get into and to make sure you utilize your benefits. So that's a great resource out there.

Our MBA program is well ranked, not just in the veteran space, but across the country, community. We're really one of the only fully 100% online schools that does a quality AACSB accredited degree. So maybe not today, but if in the future that's something you can see yourself doing, then please reach out to us and we can provide you some information. And again, I'm happy to be a resource for you. So there's not too many people named Beer that work for Washington State, so if you want to find me, you probably can. So shoot me a note. And again, glad to be here and be a resource for you all.

JEFF WILLADSEN: And I'll have all of our email addresses I'll have at the end of the slide.

MATT BEER: OK.

JEFF WILLADSEN: So if you guys want to get to me, or Matt, or Emily.

MATT BEER: I was-- I was-- I was going to add one thing, Jeff. Somebody had asked a question about benefits for if you're 100% or not 100%. I typed a message. I think you probably all saw that on there.

But essentially, if you're over 50%, over a half-time student, you will get a BAH benefit. And for online students, if you're 100% online, you're going to get 50% of the national average. And I think right now it's around 820-some dollars. Maybe a little bit more than that now. It might have gone up a little bit.

So you will get that amount of money. And then for your books, it's about $47 per credit hour or so. A lot of that's variable. It's going to be individually dependent, right? So whatever your specific situation is.

So the team at Global Campus is going to make sure you're all registered in where you go. And then, you're going to connect with our Veterans Affairs office on campus and they're going to walk you step-by-step through all that money stuff and they'll make sure you have accurate, personalized information for you. So I'm just throwing that out there.

JEFF WILLADSEN: Yeah. Thanks. I appreciate that. Yeah. I'd forgotten that that's the national average for online students. Well, thanks for putting that out there, Matt. Cool. I'll go ahead and go to the next slide here.

If you have anything else to say, Emily, about the non-degree options?

EMILY CHANDLER: Yeah. So we do have some non-degree options available. What this means is that these are credit-- so these are either certificates or just courses that you would take. And you still earn credit for these courses or certificates that you're earning, but you're not earning a full bachelors or master's degree is what that means.

So with non-degree, there is the link there so you can see the options available, but someone may use non-degree if, you know, if they want to, for instance, pursue a graduate program and they just need that one last prerequisite, right? And they didn't get that as part of their bachelors program so they may decide to just take one class with us and pursue that. So that's just one example of non-degree.

And then we also do have some certificate programs. One of them, for example, is the professional writing certificate. So maybe you have a job and you want to, kind of, up your game with where you are, then the professional writing certificate or another one of those certificate programs may be a good option. So it's just another option that we have available to students.

JEFF WILLADSEN: All right. So yes. So I have a few websites here for some tools and resources and we went over some of these. We have a specific page on our Global Campus website for veterans. So I have a lot of information that I put through here about the credits, about the different benefits, and it has links that will lead you back to give you more information about those specific rates and things like that. And you can see if you're eligible and stuff like that.

Then I also have the va.wsu.edu. So this is where Matt was talking about the Veterans Affairs people that will walk you through your benefits if you're going to be using those. So that's their website.

I'll also give you their contact information in a minute so you can get a hold of them. They'll help you work through there. If you are using benefits like the GI Bill, they'll be the ones who will be signing off your stuff, so you'll definitely be working with them.

Yeah. And then I have the va.gov at their education benefits, so you can just look at that. That will walk you through some things they provide. For active duty, Military One Source is really good. That's a lot of stuff about education and employment to help you out with that. That's really-- you can learn more about TA and that's a lot of active duty stuff.

And then, I've mentioned the transfer stuff. So if you're interested in kind of finding out how much of your stuff is going to transfer, that would be a place to start there, the transfer clearinghouse. And I have-- here's our emails.

So if you want to contact any of us, if you have any questions. If we don't know the answer, we'll direct you to the right place. We can get you connected. I know Matt has lots of good connections and knows what's going on with all the military stuff. So he'll be able to help you out. A lot of that.

And if you have any questions for me about whether, you know, what it's like being a student in active duty or as a reservist, things like that, you can go ahead and ask me. And then Emily's there too to help you out with your admission stuff.

I have the veterans-- this is the WSU veterans. So this is the online school. Goes through WSU Pullman's Veterans Affairs office there. And there's their website and their phone number, if you want to call them and they can talk to you about that stuff.

So doesn't look like anybody has more questions. So thanks everybody for coming or for coming here and learning with us. And contact us if you have any questions and we'll try to help you out as best we can. So again, we appreciate you and thank you for your service. And we're here to help. So thanks.
